LOHASAU.COM

Over the past 10 years, the team at LOHAS Australia have had extensive experience with recycled bricks in the Sydney metro area. We have taken our memories from travelling through Sydney's suburbs to colourise the recycled bricks to each particular suburb. We came to notice that suburbs were using similarly coloured bricks over the same periods of time. The reuse of handpicked existing materials allows us to produce and supply premium recycled bricks to our clients. Our recycled bricks speaks to the values at the very core of LOHAS Australia and is the embodiment of everything we believe and aspire to create, sustainable building materials. Take inspiration from this look book to use for your future project.

Historic bricks are used when renovating current structures to match Australia's earliest colonial settlers up. Our professionals are fully equipped and trained to match and spruce up the chromatic, dimensional and chronological aspects of antique historic bricks. Sandstock is an ideal option for feature walls, lining and decorating, and has the design flexibility to carve many intricate details.

Many old houses in Australia are made with classic materials that are durable and resilient to any type of weather and exterior elements. If you want to integrate this rustic look into your home, then choose used bricks. From greys to rusty reds, these bricks add a timely feel and character to any feature wall. With its ability to create a rustic atmosphere, this style is becoming a statement in the hospitality industry such as cafes and restaurants. These dry pressed bricks are well suitable for people who are looking for something unique. These bricks can be used as pavers in internal dwellings and are fast becoming the best seller because of its 'wow factor'.
